It is continuously important for dairy professionals to tell dairy's story and help create a greater understanding of our industry and our products. Although today we largely reach consumers through technology, let us not forget the value of reaching individuals in person at community events such as Ag Days or on your very own farm or facility during a tour. Finding time to personally demonstrate the contribution that dairy farmers and milk processors make to society and health, is a fun and rewarding way to give back to our industry and the community.

If you are interested in conducting tours or reaching out to the public at events, Dairy Council of California offers a number of tools, tips and resources that will help add value to your efforts.
